

Your friend has a fifteen-year-old son. Walking home one night you see him in the park with a group of friends, painting graffiti on a wall.	Leaving the supermarket in a hurry to get back to work, you accidentally hit a parked car. You have only scratched the paint a little.	Working late one night, you see a colleague stealing stationery from a supply cupboard.	You see a T-shirt you really like in a shop, and it's very cheap. You know that the company who makes this T-shirt treats their workers very badly.
Checking your bank account, you realise the bank has made a mistake and there is more money in your account than you should have.	Visiting a family in another country, you are offered a food that you really don't like. You know this food is very expensive and you will appear rude if you don't eat it.	You are robbed on holiday and fill out your insurance form stating that your camera was stolen. You later find your camera in another bag.	Paying for something in a supermarket, the shop assistant gives you too much change.
A close friend asks you to lie in court and say he/she was with you when a crime happened. He/She wasn't with you at the time.	A friend who you work with is going for promotion. You know he/she really wants the job. Your boss offers you the promotion instead.	You are a doctor. Your colleague, another doctor, asks you to write him/her a prescription for a drug 'to help him/her relax'.	You borrow your partner's laptop. While using it, an instant message program pops up and someone says 'Hi gorgeous'.
Your friend gives you a lift and crashes his/her car. While waiting for the police to arrive, he/she asks you to say you were driving, as he/she already has a record and will lose his/her licence.	You're cooking dinner for friends, and you've spent four hours making the dish. At the last minute, while your guests are waiting, you drop the food on the floor.	It's your friend's birthday, and you've forgotten to get him/her a present. When you left your last job (where you worked with the same friend), you were given an MP3 player that you didn't want as you already had a better one.	You're at a party, and someone starts talking to you – it's clear he/she knows who you are. You can't remember his/her name (or where you know him/her from), but you're sure you've met him/her before.
You find a large amount of money in the street.	You travel home on the same train from work every day. Because you work late, there are never any ticket inspectors to check your ticket at the station.	A friend gives you a 'hot tip' that the company he/she works for is about to launch a successful new product, and offers you shares in the company.	You see someone shoplifting in a supermarket.